Superintendent Johnson, of the Fort Wayne School for Feeble-minded Children, has appointed a resident physician to the institution in the person of Dr. Delia Howe, at a salary of $1,200 a year. Dr. Howe was formerly an interne in the Illinois Eastern Hospital for the Insane at Kankakee, and comes highly recommended from the State officers of Illinois. She has had twelve years' practice. The resignation of Dr. Sweringer took effect March 30. Mrs. Johnson now acts as matron of the institution, and the office of assistant superintendent, which she held while Mrs. Orr was connected with the school, has been abolished.

A Y. W. C. A. Training School. Miss Ida Bradshaw, of Chicago, international secretary of the Y. W. C. A., addressed a number of women of the northeast side of the city yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. T. Brown, on Park avenue. She presented the matter of the association in a broad and comprehensive way, with the view of interesting the women in the work. The substance of her talk was the same as that given the day before at the home of Mrs. Cornelius. The association will open a training school in Chicago this fall to prepare young women o carry on the work. The associations have been established in many of the larger cities. In order to put the work on the right footing the main society will prepare young women to go out to the different places. With correct business methods there is no reason why the organizations should not be successful in the best sense. Summer schools for the training of young women are held in Massachusetts, Wisconsin and Tennessee. Miss Bradshaw will spend the summer at Rogersville, Tenn., at the school there. Last evening Miss Bradshaw again presented the subject to a number of people at the First Baptist Church. Her earnest manner and attractive way of relating the needs for and the benefits of such institutions is convincing, and there will be a meeting called very soon with a view to effecting a permanent organization in this city. This afternoon, at 3 o'clock, a meeting will be afternoon, at 3 o'clock, a meeting will be held on the South Side, at Fletcher-place Church.

THE LOCAL POLITICAL TREND. to Early Conventions Will Be Called -South-Side Meeting.

The chairman of the two city committees have not yet seriously considered the matter of making a call for the purpose of perfecting the preliminaries necessary for the holding of the city conventions. It is yet early and there has been no demand on the part of any of the candidates for an early convention, although many of them have expressed their desire that the conventions be held earlier than usual. It is alnost necessary that the city be redistricted before the next election and that would necessarily have to be done pefore nomina tions for councilmn can be made. A still earlier preliminary is the selection of the city committees which cannot be done until the precincts are arranged as they will be when the vote is taken. None of these things have yet been considered, but is among the strong probabilities that the Council will soon take up the matter of redistricting the city. This cannot be done until the time elapses in which the residents of North Indianapolls have the right to defeat by remonstrance the annexation of that territory. Until all these things are settled, the conventions cannot be held. The general opinion seems to be that the conventions of two years ago were held at the most auspicious times. Both parties neminated in July. A few weeks ago there were some candidates who favored holding conventions not earlier than was necessary to put them before the taking of the sixty-day poll, but this sentiment seems to have died out during the last two weeks, and now the tendency is to place them somewhat earlier than before. The South Side Republican Club has more

The South Side Republican Club has more polities in it just now than most any other organization in the city. Every Wednesday night is devoted to the discussion of politics, but the speakers are not confined to city affairs; in fact there is no restriction whatever placed upon them. They are simply invited to address the club and are permitted to make their talk one of politics or may ignore politics and politicians if they choose to do so. This causes the discussions to take all kinds of turns, One speaker sometimes covers the entire One speaker sometimes covers the entire field from President Cleveland down to the man that shovels the dirt from the gutters under Street Commissioner Fisher. The speakers last night were Robert E. Smith, Judge Stubbs and Thaddeus S. Rollins, with a few "sandwiches," as the speaker termed them, by the president of the club, W. H. Leedy, The light two markers elected. termed them, by the president of the club, W. H. Leedy. The first two speakers closed their addresses with the announcement that they would place their names before the Republican convention for the nomination for police judge. In their talks they touched only lightly upon politics. Judge Stubbs devoted most of his time to the proposed park system. As a side issue he urged the cutting down of the courthouse lawn and the removal of the outside steps, making the removal of the outside steps, making the entrances through the present basement. He would then have the elevators placed in the center of the building in what is now the light and air shaft, thus making the basement the most desirable part of the building. Mr. Leedy suggested that the best way to accomplish this would be to have the city sanitarian condemn the basement of the building as unhealthful and thus compet the County Commissioners to do something with it.

The discussion took various phases during

The discussion took various phases during the evening. Mr. Rollins devoted most of the evening. Mr. Rollins devoted most of his time to a talk on the currency question, and in a few words showed the fallacy of the Democratic plan as advocated by Secretary Carlisle in the bill which he, with the indorsement of President Cleveland, sent to the last Congress and asked to have passed as an administration measure. have passed as an administration measure. The meetings are to be held every Wednesday night at the club rooms, No. 300 Virginia avenue, and various persons will be invited to address them. Politics often crops out in the meetings, but more often the addresses are simply on subjects that are of interest to the citizens of this city and to residents of the South Side especially. Next Wednesday night it is expected to have Judges Monks and Jordan, of the Supreme Court, present. The meetings are not closed to persons who are not members of the club, nor are they for Republicans only. Last night an invitation was extended to all persons having an interest in the city and South Side to attend any of the meetings.

A PENNSYLVANIA EX-OFFICER.

Governor's Extradition Warrant for F. M. Neeley, Charged with Forgery.

Governor Matthews yesterday issued a warrant for the extradition of F. M. Neeley, of Clarion county, Pennsylvania, who is wanted there on information and belief for the forgery of a $6,000 bond in his capacity as tax collector for the township of Richland. There is also a charge of embezzlement of $1,512 which was the amount of his shortage when, after serving many years, he was displaced at an election and failed to turn over to his successor all that belonged to the township. It is said that the crime was not prosecuted sooner because Neeley had friends and relatives on the school board who wanted the township to be contented with a civil suit for collection of the amount lost from his bondsmen. The crime was committed in 1892 and in years previous. J. M. Steltzer was appointed agent to accompany the prisoner to his former home. The Governor also honored a requisition from Ohio for the extradiction of E. L. Huston, who is wanted in Butler county, Ohio, for burglary and larceny.

His Employers' Testimonial. The funeral of John Reed, the street-car man who was killed by a car Monday evening, occurred at the home, 508 East Eleventh, yesterday, at noon, and was largely attended by the employes of the street-car company, with whom Reed was very popcompany, with whom Reed was very popular. His old car, No. 507, on the Collegeavenue line, was draped during the day, and the men wore pieces of crape. Resolutions were adopted by the directors of the company, setting forth Reed's good character as an employe and stating the loss which is felt by the company. The remains were taken to the Salem Cemetery for burial, and were followed by a large number of carriages filled by the relatives and friends of the deceased.

The Jewish Passover.

The Feast of the Passover is now being celebrated by the Jewish people of the city. This feast continues one week each year, beginning with the 13th of Nisan, which is the first month in the Jewish calendar, This day was last Tuesday, or really the event beginning with the evening before, when the more orthodox families hold services of rejoicing at their respective homes, closing with a feast. During the season of the passover, no bread is eaten except the unleavened bread. On the last day of the celebration, which is the anniversary of the day when the Israelites passed from the Red sea in safety, special ceremonies of thanksgiving are held at the Jewish synagogue. .

Quarterly Postoffice Reports.

shows that the sale of stamps amounted to $92,550, the box rents $338, the amount deposited by outside postoffices $14,667, the amount deposited by the government $160,-000 and the total receipts from postal income sources $123,809. The amount paid the clerks was $14,180, to the railway clerks $59,930 and to the carriers $19,050. The net earnings of the office for the quarter were $87,109.

Bryan Is Not Yet Free. David C. Bryan is still in the custody of Sheriff Womack. Governor Matthews absolutely refused to have anything to do with the case yesterday, and, as a consequence, Bryan was compelled to spend another night in jail, much against his and his lawyer's wishes. The case will be considered by Judge Brown this morning, at 9 o'clock, and it will then be decided what shall be done with the prisoner.

MR. JOHNSON TESTED

HE IMPROVED ON IRVING BISHOP'S FAMOUS MIND-READING TRICK.

Drives Through the City at Break-Neck Speed and Finds a Hidden Article.

Had the big policeman stationed at Illinois and Washington streets been suddenly confronted by a Lady Godiva he would not have been in a more perplexing frame of mind than when he spied a plindfolded nan yesterday afternoon driving a carriage at dangerous speed down Washington street. If the man on the box had been without bandage over his eyes, the policeman would have clearly seen his duty in the premises, but he hesitated for a moment, doubting the actuality of what he supposed he saw. He pondered just the moment and then lumbered in pursuit of the carriage, yelling for the driver to stop. The regular liveried functionary had been superseded for the time, although he still remained on the box, shouting back to the occupants of the carriage that he would "be damned if they didn't have to pay all fines and damages." The four gentlemen vowed that he would have to bravely stand under this self-invoked eternal condemnation; it wasn't any of their funeral, and they would be glad indeed if they could gracefully tumble out of the vehicle. The policeman was distanced presently and there was little hope for the occupants, who ceased praying and began calculating as to the number of little lives that were to be sacrificed in juggernaut fashion, for children seemed to spring up in the center of the street. A few fashionable equipages were put to rout, a contraband banana wagon was driven to the leeway of an alley, shoppers clambered to the sidewalks and one sprightly young fellow saved his life by circling an electric center pole. But the blindfolded man had neither fear nor sympathy, and his ears were walled to all entreaties. Paul Alexander Johnson, thought reader, was out for a test.

Four guliible men, selected from newspaper ranks, had in the largeness of their hearts and with inherent curiosity, consented to pass judgment on the blown-inthe-bottle genuineness of Mr. Johnson's thought reading. They hadn't the fairtest idea that a mad Roman chariot race was an incentive to this psychological demonstration, but Mr. Johnson seemed to catch his mysterious inspiration in this fashion.
The rest of the party wisned they had let him take aboard his inspiration by himself.
Not a man in the vehicle felt proud, as some men do feel, parauing behind a livery stable team. After it was all over, and the thought reader had accomplished what he promised to do, the reassuring remark was dropped that Johnson had driven in the same manner through the most crowded streets of Chicago without accident. sented to pass judgment on the blown-ined streets of Chicago without accident. The test was the one which made Washington Irving Bishop famous, that of driving to a distant part of the city and finding an article which had been hidden by a committee, Mr. Jonnson did more; he compounded a prescription in a remarkable manner, "reading" the mind of the man who held the little slip of paper. Mr. Johnson was met at the Bates House Mr. Johnson was met at the Bates House by a dozen people well known in the city and there the plan was unfolded. He had before him a large map of the city. Four men were to drive in a carriage to the office of a physician, who was to prepare a prescription and seal it in an envelope. This envelope was to be taken to the post-office and put away in a lock-box. The key to the box was then to be hidden. Then the party was to drive back to the bot office and put away in a lock-box. The key to the box was then to be hidden. Then the party was to drive back to the hotel, where Mr. Johnson was under the guard of a committee of a half dozen people. All this was carried out. The committee first drove to the office of Dr. W. N. Wishard, who kindly wrote out a prescription, the component parts of which were two powders. Chemist Hurty consented to allow the thought reader to work back of his prescription counter and Postmaster Sahm furnished the lock-box and key. The key was hid in the safe of United States Marshal Hawkins in the next building. When the committee of four returned to the hotel Mr. Johnson was blindfolded, and with a pencil he traced out on the map the route taken by the carriage, net, however, without two attempts. The carriage had been taken over a circuitous route in order to fool him. The next procedure was to have the gentleman, while blindfolded, drive over a route he laid out to the place where the key was hid, find ft, unlock the box, obtain the sealed envelope and drive to Dr. Hurty's place of business at Ohio and Pennsylvania streets. There Dr. Hurty was to open the envelope, commit the prescription to memory. Mr. Johnson was to read the Doctor's mind and in accordance therewith prepare the prescription, being blindfolded all the while. The disinterested genthe Doctor's mind and in accordance therewith prepare the prescription, being blindfolded all the while. The disinterested gentleman who sat on the box with Johnson had a wire tied to his wrist, and the mind reader used the wire for thinking purposes. Alighting from the carriage at the post-office corner, the man with the strange faculty dashed into the postoffice proper and then bolted out of the doors to the next building, dragging his subject with him. He sprinted up the steps, whirled around a stairway, and in less time than it takes to mention the proverbial Jack Robinson's name he had made his way to the safe, clutching the key from behind a box of envelopes. Rushing down to the postoffice again, towing the man tied to the wire, Mr. Johnson, with remarkable precision, selected the right box, No. 40, and opened it. With the envelope in his teeth opened it. With the envelope in his teeth he jumped on to the carriage box and set out in a mad pace for Dr. Hurty's. He missed calculations about one inch on a center pole, and a few minutes were lost in making repairs to harness. A crowd of several hundred was in the wake of the vehicle.

several hundred was in the wake of the vehicle.

Dr. Hurty opened the envelope according to the plan. A number of physicians had gathered there awaiting the arrival of the thought reader, who threaded his way through the crowd till he stood in front of the prescription counter where a big array of bottles, big and little, confronted the blindfolded man. Dr. Hurty committed the formula of the prescription to memory. The thought reader held the Doctor's hand. After a few minutes he told the Doctor that he was baffled. He wanted another subject. Dr. Ferguson volunteered and offered no better results than the chemist. "You are a doctor," remarked the mind reader in disgust, and he grabbed one of the others, who furnished an easy victim. In a jiffy Mr. Johnson lifted down the bottle that read "pulvis doreil." In the second jiffy he had his hands on the "quinine sulph" glassware. He carefully weighed the exact quantity of each drug, as called for in the prescription, and separated the mixture into four parts. The prescription was correct, and the bandage was taken from Mr. Johnson's eyes. He was apparently very weak from the exertion. Dr. Hurty was positive it was all muscle reading and not mind reading. The man who held the prescription, however, was unacquainted with the meaning of the peculiar abbreviations which adorn a prescription, and this makes it the more remarkable. scription, and this makes it the more remarkable.

"I think it is merely muscle reading," said Dr. Hurty. "I believe that he has so perfected his sense of touch that he gathers his clews from the involuntary movements of the subject's muscles."

The most skeptical were willing to concede that it was a remarkably clever performance.

His Witness Arrested.

Thomas Downing, colored, was arrested yesterday by Deputy Marshal Dooling for selling liquor without observing the government regulations as to stamp taxes. His saloon is on the corner of Bright and North streets. His defense was that he was not the owner of the saloon, but was only The quarterly report of Postmaster Sahm | running it on the per cent. basis for its former owner, Henry Maxey. Maxey apformer owner, Henry Maxey. Maxey appeared as a witness and swore that Downing's story was true. His evidence, however, had so much in it that was contradictory that United States District Attorney Burke ordered the arrest of the witness for alding and abetting Downing in the violation of the law. Both were sent to jail in default of $1,000 bond. Downing was accompanied to the marshal's office by "Pig-head John," a notorious character about Cincinnati, who formerly kept a saloon in that city. It is said that he is a "bad man" and once killed a policeman. He is acting as barkeeper for Downing.

The New Law Regarding Convicts. Some of the convicts in the State prisons have been writing for information concerning the new law regulating the discharge of prisoners at the expiration of their sentences. The provisions are that the prisoner must be returned to the county from which he was sent to the penitentiary in case of the sheriff of the county and there released. The former allowance of $15 which the prisoner received as he left the prison is no longer authorized, and he must depend upon what he earned in prison or what friends give him until he can get a start. It is understod that the law is not popular with the prisoners, many of whom do not care to return to their former homes and some who want to go to their homes were not sent from counties any where near their homes. The motive of the law, it is said, is to relieve the cities in which the prisons are located from the temptation to develop a colony of former convicts within their gates.

HE SAT DOWN ON THE TRACK.

Coroner Castor Was Notified a Short Time Afterwards.

Coroner Castor was notified yesterday afternoon that a man had been killed by a train on the Big Four road near Acton, and he went to the place about 2 o'clock. He found that Harry House, a farmer living at London, a village situated a few miles from Acton, while intoxicated, sat down on the railroad and a train had struck him, killing him instantly. The engineer saw the man, but supposed that he would get up when he heard the train coming, and the train was not slowed down until too late. It is supposed that House had started to walk home and, becoming weary on the road, he sat down on the track and went to sleep. The body was sent home.
